

WAKE FOR SLAIN MAN.

It is a Tragedy of Cherry Hill, Where Revenge for the Killing of Tommy McMahon Will Be Worked Out in East Side Fashion

PADDY SHEA NOT CAUGHT.

He Has Not Been Back Long from the Island, and Crime in the Hamilton Street "Gap" Quickly Followed His Release.

In the little parlor on the second floor of the tenement, No. 11 Hamilton street, the friends of Tommy McMahon will gather to-night and "wake" the body. McMahon was killed yesterday by Paddy Shea and to-day the killing is the talk of Cherry Hill. Friends of Paddy are rushing the growler, kicking about the size of the pint, and hoping that Paddy, who has thus far escaped the police, will live long and die happy.

Friends of McMahon are not aiding the police to find Shea. Cherry Hill has its own way of settling its troubles. Some fine morning Paddy may be found in the backyard of a tenement or in the rear of a saloon with his head crushed, and the verdict of the coroner's jury may be that he fell down a flight of stairs. If he is caught, indicted and placed on trial it is doubtful if the police could obtain any witnesses to tell how he killed McMahon.

On the other hand, friends of Paddy would come forward and swear he was attacked by McMahon and killed him in self-defense. It is a violation of the ethics of Cherry Hill to aid the police to swear against a man at a trial or admit having seen anybody do anything.

Known as "The Gap."
Hamilton street, where the killing occurred, is a narrow alley. To the police and the neighborhood it is known as "The Gap." It begins at Catharine street, a block from the river front, and runs north about a hundred yards. On both sides are tenements, and it is compelling the dweller within "The Gap" to walk a block for a pint, accommodating brewers have established a saloon or two in the middle of the block. It was in "The Gap" in the early days of Roosevelt and the dry Sundays that followed his decree of a closed village that beer was trotted across "The Gap" on clothes-lines. This much for the color that goes with a story of "The Gap."

It was in "The Gap" that McMahon and his bride of a little more than a year lived. McMahon was slight, but well knit. He lived with his mother and father-in-law in No. 11. When he worked he drove a truck. Paddy Shea lived with his mother in No. 31. When Paddy was elsewhere the neighborhood knew that he was doing a stretch on the island. It might be for kicking in the ribs of a drunken longshoreman or stealing a piece of lead pipe from a wagon near the Catharine Ferry slip.

Not Long Out of Jail.
Paddy got out of jail a few weeks ago. He had a long siege of it wheeling sand on the island for a new wing that is being built on one of the hospitals, and it was right when he got through with his sentence he should come home to mother and his two sisters to be taken care of and to recuperate from the hardships of the East River resort.

"I wouldn't like to speak hard of any one," said the mother-in-law of the man who was killed. "I have no word to say against Paddy. It's for others to speak harsh of a man. But Willie—Tommy was his name, but we called him Willie—was a good boy. Mrs. Sheehan saw the whole thing. Willie was shot in the back. Paddy Shea would make two of Willie."

"It's only a few days ago me and Willie were passing by the Shea's. She lives on the first floor, and as we went by out comes a cup right in front of us. 'He licked my boy Paddy,' said she. 'Paddy'll kill him on sight,' said she. 'Mrs. Shea,' says I, 'it's wrong for a woman of your age to be talking that way.' 'Paddy'll kill, he'll kill him,' she yelled, and we walked on."

Threat Was Kept.
"Well, whatever they had a quarrel about it was none of my business. But Willie he whipped Paddy and did him good, he did. He was twice as big as Willie. 'Why, he'd almost make three of him.'"

"Yesterday Willie was sittin' out front and Paddy Shea comes up behind him—the coward—and he shot him. Oh, Mrs. Sheehan saw it all. That's all there is to it. Poor Willie! He was only twenty years old."

The widow of young McMahon was tearful. She had spent the greater part of the night endeavoring to get the coroner to give permission for the body to be removed from the morgue and arranging for bringing it home.

Mrs. McMahon is not yet nineteen years old. She has a baby five months old. In the street where her family have lived for years she was one of several pretty sisters. All of them are married. She was the youngest and the pet of the neighborhood, and when she married the young couple went to live with her people.

The Shea's are also old-timers in the street. Paddy "owns" it, according to the police. Mrs. Shea, since the killing of McMahon, has been receiving her friends.

"Sure, I don't believe my Paddy did it at all. Why, he wasn't seen in the street yesterday. Did any of you see him? Sure you did not. Why, he said he was going to Canada yesterday morning and haven't seen him since."

On the desk of the police of the Madison Street Station is the most peculiar black-jack ever captured. It was Paddy Shea's. It is made from the leg bone of a horse and is hard as iron.

When it came into this precinct, said Capt. Hodgins, of the Madison Street Station, "I was in a post. The killing of McMahon will be followed by several others. I wish they would fight till none of them was left. McMahon's family say he was all right. He wasn't working. Shea was a crook. Look at that black-jack he had!"

SUICIDE FROM A FERRY-BOAT.

Unknown Man Plunged from Deck Into the North River in Sight of a Crowd of New Jersey Commuters.

EVADED THE PASSENGERS. IT ACTED LIKE A POISON.

Then There Was a Sudden Leap from the Rear Rail, and Efforts of Those on Board to Rescue the Man Were Futile.

While the ferry-boat Montclair, of the D. L. and W. Railroad, was in mid-stream to-day on her trip from 1100-ken to Christopher street a well-dressed man leaped from the deck and was drowned.

The boat was filled with commuters. The man who jumped waited until most of the passengers had gone inside the cabin or to the bow of the ferryboat. A deckhand polishing a rail was near him on one side and the man moved over to the women's division. As soon as no one was near him he climbed over the iron gate at the stern and before any one had a chance to follow him he jumped and was in the river. For an instant his body was seen buffeted by the waves.

The cry of "Man overboard!" drew the crowd to the stern, and a life line and ring were thrown over in the hope the man would grasp it. It did not get near him. From the pilot house the captain saw the man and heard the commotion. The boat was turned from her course for a few minutes and an effort made to rescue the man. The deckhands put a boat into the water, but before they got into it the man, who had sunk, resurfaced again for an instant and then went down for the last time.

The police were notified on both sides of the river.

CRUEL DRIVERS PUNISHED.

Former Secretary of Treasury Fairchild's Wife Is Complainant in One Case.

Two cabmen were convicted of cruelty to animals to-day in the court of Special Sessions. Mrs. Charles S. Fairchild, wife of the former Secretary of the Treasury, was the complainant against one.

On March 13 Mrs. Fairchild saw George Reidel, of No. 428 East Twentieth street, beating his team in Union Square and had him arrested. He was fined $10.

Duncan B. Harrison, the theatrical man, was the other complainant. On March 19 Harrison tried to reason with Terrence Gallagher, a cabman, of No. 104 Vernon avenue, Brooklyn, about the punishment Gallagher was giving his horse in front of the Imperial Hotel. Gallagher's only reply was to beat the horse harder. He was fined $25.

SEASICK CHILD KILLED BY DRUG.

Little Kaplan Girl Suffered Greatly in Steerage of Kronprinz and Another Passenger Gave Her a "Remedy."

IT ACTED LIKE A POISON.

The Child's Mother, Almost Insane from Grief, Attempted to Leap Overboard When Baby Was Buried at Sea by the Captain.

When the Kronprinz, of the North German Lloyd, arrived to-day was reported the death of Ludliller Kaplan, a little girl in the steerage, who died shortly after having taken a drink from a bottle given to her by another passenger as a remedy for seasickness.

The child and her mother suffered the first few days out. Another passenger handed the child a bottle which was said to contain a mixture of rum and something else which had been put up for seasickness.

Soon after taking it she had all the symptoms of a person suffering from poisoning by wood alcohol. The ship's surgeon was called, but the little one died shortly after she was attacked.

With the captain reading the burial service, the body, sewed in canvas and weighted, was slid from the deck of the Kronprinz the following day. The mother of the child, who had been ill, was at first too sick to realize that the little one was dead. She did not grasp the full meaning of the situation until the little one was buried and the great waves in the wake of the ship showed her no mark where in future she could come and kneel.

Then she jumped forward screaming. "My child! my child! my baby!" and would have thrown herself over the side had not sailors dragged her back. Passengers tried to reason with her, but without success. For the rest of the voyage she was kept constantly under observation to prevent her jumping overboard.

When the ship's passengers were transferred to Ellis Island to-day the woman, broken-hearted, carried two bundles—one her own and the other the clothing of the little one, which she hugged to her breast.

NO SET-BACK FROM THESE TABLETS.

Common Result of Liquid Kidney Remedies.

Kidney-Wort Tablets Cure Without Alcohol.

Physicians wash their hands of patients with kidney troubles who insist on taking alcohol either as a drink or in liquid prepared kidney remedies.

That alcohol is an ingredient of liquid kidney remedies is well known to every one who handles these goods. If your druggist will not tell you, your physician will.

And he will also tell you that there is but one entirely safe and at the same time effective prepared remedy for the kidneys, whether they are slightly deranged or seriously affected—Dr. Pettin-gill's Kidney-Wort Tablets, a marvellously effective remedy, indorsed by all physicians, used in children's hospitals and dispensaries for adults, and always with wonderful success.

Many a man apparently in perfect health suddenly feels an unaccountable general weakness. He finds he cannot stand or walk as well as formerly. His feet and legs get sore and tender; they puff up during the day, and in the evening it becomes a great relief to rest them on a table as high as his head. In a short time this swelling becomes permanent and extends over his abdomen. He begins to get distressed, which increases from day to day. He cannot breathe as freely as formerly. He loses his appetite.

Meanwhile he has noticed that his urine has changed in appearance; that it is dark in color, heavier, has much sediment, passes much more than formerly. It begins to distress him every time he makes urine. Painful as those warning symptoms are, do not for a moment forget that they are forerunners of worse agonies to come—torments which will follow, as surely as night follows day, unless the warning is heeded.

Dr. Pettin-gill's Kidney-Wort, now possible to obtain in its new and most effective form of handy tablets, will cure every form of kidney disorder from a common backache to diabetes.

At the first backache examine your urine for cloudiness, reddish deposits and small particles floating upon it. At the earliest sign of kidney weakness use Kidney-Wort Tablets. Only the very ignorant and the badly misinformed are willing to risk taking any liquid kidney remedy.
